I applaud most of the study as helpful and strong on application of the principles of Biblical womanhood in Titus 2, but I wish the authors would not stretch some Scripture references to say more than is actually there. We encountered this same problem in True Womanhood 101. I recommend the study but with the caution that leaders should study carefully as they prepare to lead. We found ourselves having to explain differences in the book and in the Biblical text several times, because the Biblical text was stretched to say something that was really not there. Solid, well written, colorful graphics, easy to read and digest with abundant thought provoking ways to re-look at Biblical texts. The questions at the end of every day's study are an inspiration to look deep into your personal walk with God but then be motivated to move forward and understand that He has a Master Plan for your life! This book is ideal for use in either small group settings or one-on-one mentoring. I will definitely be giving a copy to my daughters and other women I know who are serious about mentoring the next generation of Godly women who genuinely looking for a new and fresh approach to discerning His will for their lives. I'm close to finishing this study and have really enjoyed it. I love how it focuses on the specific areas in the life of a woman. Nancy and Mary to a great job referencing scripture and pointing us towards Christ.

Excellent Bible Study for women! I would give this more stars if I could. One of the best encouraging Bible studies I have ever been a part of. Beautiful book with a solid biblical Christian perspective. Will be searching for more books by these authors.

I have thoroughly enjoyed going through this Bible study with women at church. It teaches what the Bible says about true womanhood, not what the world says about it. It will definitely challenge your world beliefs about what a godly woman should be.

Interior Design, a 10-week study on Titus 1:3-5, covers the inner qualities of discernment, honor, affection, discipline, virtue, purity, responsibility, benevolence, disposition, legacy and beauty. The book is colorful, well-illustrated, with Scripture printed in the margins. The questions are designed to change us from the inside out, allowing God's design for True Womanhood to shine. Even though I have only been able to read a few chapters of True Woman 101 online (I am planning on purchasing this book so I can study both), what I have read shows that True Woman 201 picks up where the first book left off. It is definitely written in a way that women can understand what God is asking us as his daughters to learn from the study of the Book of Titus. I would recommend that it be used for either Woman's Bible Study groups or as a tool for a Sunday School class for women from 16 years old and up. Interior Design, Nancy and Mary give the Biblical guidelines for the Godly characteristics of Titus 2 and encourage women to live it out. They state: "We are all unique. Every woman's circumstances are distinct. We each need to carefully discern how to apply God's principles in our own lives." • A great study to learn how to do this.
